Analysis of an Unknown Binary, Analysis of a Windows 95 System, and Legal Issues from Copyrighted Materials on Publicly Available Systems

GCFA Practical version 1.4, parts 1, 2a, and 3

David Cragg

original date 05 August 2004

resubmit date 27 September 2004

Abstract: An unknown binary, recovered from a forensic disk image, is identified as a version of bmap. Analysis of a windows 95 system on a FAT filesystem yields information about the user's activities, despite the limitations of the FAT file system. A quick review of statutes and guidance when copyrighted material or child pornography is found on publicly available servers on the organization's network.

1.0 Part 1 - Analysis of an Unknown Binary

1.1 Background

An employee, John Price is suspected of sharing copyrighted files on public systems. A floppy disk was recovered from his computer. An image of the disk, designated fl-160703-jp1.dd, was provided for analysis. The disk image contained an unknown binary, named prog.

Prog is analyzed in detail, and identified. The other contents of the disk are examined for any evidence of inappropriate activity, specifically relating to copyright infringement.

1.3 Program Description

The prog executable is a utility that can read and write to raw disk devices, to hide, recover, and delete data in file slack space.

Slack space is the wasted space when a file is smaller than the filesystem block size. It is normally invisible to users and applications.

The unix file system normally makes this space, and any information in it, inaccessible to the user. Normally, file slack should be empty, as it is over-written with nulls when the file is written to.

To access the slack space at the end of a file, requires reading and writing to the disk directly, bypassing the file system. This is exactly what prog does.

A demonstration of a simple data hiding exercise with prog is shown below.

File Edit View Terminal Go Help
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# rm -f test-files/prog-demo.txt
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# touch test-files/prog-demo.txt
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# echo "hello world" > test-files/prog-demo.txt
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# more test-files/prog-demo.txt
hello world
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# echo "this is a secret message from prog" \
> | ./prog --mode p test-files/prog-demo.txt
stuffing block 4589664
file size was: 12
slack size: 4084
block size: 4096
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# more test-files/prog-demo.txt
hello world
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# ./prog --mode s test-files/prog-demo.txt getting from block 4589664
file size was: 12
slack size: 4084
block size: 4096
this is a secret message from prog
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]#

A fresh text file is created, then prog is executed with the "--mode p" option to insert a message into the slack space of the file. Data is retrieved with "prog --mode s" to show successful insertion. The legitimate contents of the file remain unchanged.

Analysis of prog began with a comparison of the MD5 checksum for the extracted file to the checksum file supplied.

File Edit View Terminal Go Help
[forensic@LinuxForensics floppy]$ cat /images/practical/part1/prog.md5
7b80d9aff486c6aa6aa3efa63cc56880 prog
[forensic@LinuxForensics floppy]$ md5sum prog-dir/prog
7b80d9aff486c6aa6aa3efa63cc56880 prog-dir/prog
[forensic@LinuxForensics floppy]$

as shown in the screen capture, they match.

Examination of the output of the strings command for prog revealed that a help option was available. Output of "prog --help" is in Appendix A.

The program version, 1.0.20, appears to be identified in the in the first line of output. The references to slack manipulation in the command descriptions suggested a steganography or other data-hiding tool. A Google search for data hiding tools found (Chuvakin). The description of bmap made it a good candidate for prog's identity, so it was downloaded, compiled, and compared.

I was unable to build a version of bmap with an identical MD5 checksum to prog, so I proceeded to compare the behavior of the programs. Output of "bmap --help" is listed in appendix A.

Although both programs appear to perform the same functions, all of the command options are shortened. These cosmetic changes are enough to prevent the checksums of the two programs from matching, regardless of other circumstances.

A repeat of the previous data hiding exercise, using bmap, is shown below

File Edit View Terminal Go Help
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# rm -f test-files/bmap-demo.txt
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# touch test-files/bmap-demo.txt
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# echo "hello world" > test-files/bmap-demo.txt
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# more test-files/bmap-demo.txt
hello world
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# echo "this is a secret message from bmap" \
> | ./bmap --mode putslack test-files/bmap-demo.txt
stuffing block 4589665
file size was: 12
slack size: 4084
block size: 4096
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# more test-files/bmap-demo.txt
hello world
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# ./bmap --mode slack test-files/bmap-demo.txt
getting from block 4589665
file size was: 12
slack size: 4084
block size: 4096
this is a secret message from bmap
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]#

bmap uses the command "putslack" to insert data and "slack" to display it. Next, bmap is used to examine the data hidden by prog.

© SANS Institute 2004

File Edit View Terminal Go Help
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]# ./bmap --mode slack test-files/prog-demo.txt
getting from block 4589664
file size was: 12
slack size: 4084
block size: 4096
this is a secret message from prog
[root@LinuxForensics floppy]#

The data displays correctly.

1.4 Forensic Details

The access time of the executable, recorded above in Binary Details, is more recent than the modification and inode change times. This is often an indicator that the executable has been run on the system since installation.

Below is the output of the file command run against prog

images-fl-160703-jp1.dd-a..prog: ELF 32-bit LSB executable, Intel 80386, version 1 (SYSV), for GNU/Linux 2.2.5, statically linked, stripped

This program is an ELF format executable, compiled to run on Intel architecture, on a Linux 2.2.5 or later kernel. All required libraries have been linked into the program at compile time (static linking), so it will not require access to the libraries on the system where it is run. Finally, debugging information has been stripped from the binary.

The prog executable appears to be useable "as is" and requires no special installation procedure.

An strace command was run to monitor file related system calls made by prog during a data hiding exercise similar to the one above. The results show all of the files that prog read from or wrote to during the exercise. The results of all strace runs are in Appendix B.

Strace reports six file-related system calls. First is `execve`, the system call that actually loads and executes prog. The zero at the end of the system call is the return value. A return value of zero means successful termination. Non-zero return values normally indicate different errors, depending on the system call.

The next system call is `lstat64`. This system call returns a file's status, which is the unix term for the file's meta-data. The target file is `prog-demo.txt`, the test file for the demonstration. The returned value `st_mode=S_IFREG` means that this is a regular file. The next value, `0644`, is the file permissions, giving the owner read and write access, with read-only access to members of the owner's group, and the world. The value `st_size=12` reports that the file is 12 bytes long. The rest of the output is truncated by strace for brevity.

Next is the `open` system call. The test file `prog-demo.txt` is opened in read-only mode. The return value of "3" for the open system call is not an error. Open, when successful, returns a file descriptor for the file. The operating system has created a pointer to the file, that the program can use to access the file in subsequent system calls. The program uses the file descriptor, in this case 3, when reading from or the file.

Next, a second `lstat64` call is made for the file `prog-demo.txt`. Then, `lstat64` is called for the file `/dev/hdc3`. This file is the device file for the hard disk. The device file is used when access is needed to the raw disk, bypassing the file system. This is necessary to access slack space or make changes not permitted by the file system. The `st_mode=S_IFBLK` value means that this is a block device file. The file permissions are `0660`, giving the owner (root) and group read and write permissions. No access is granted to anyone else. The `st_rdev` argument returns a code indicating the type of device.

Finally, the file `/dev/hdc3` is opened for writing. The open system call returns a file descriptor of "4" for this file (die.net).

The strace output shows that prog opens its target file in read-only mode, but does not write to it directly. The data is written using the device file for the hard disk, which was opened in write-only mode.

The strace command was repeated for a data reading exercise. Again, prog reads the target file, and then accesses the device file for the disk. The only difference is that the device file is opened in read-only mode.

Because of this method of writing to the disk, the target file access time will be updated, but the modification time will not change. It is not obvious that anything has been done to the target file.

Using the device file to access the raw disk requires root privileges. The prog executable found on the floppy disk was owned by a non-root user. The user of this copy of prog would need some method of gaining root privilege when using the program.

1.5 Program Identification

The prog executable is a version of bmap, a data hiding utility. A brief description of bmap, with links to source code, appears in (Chuvakin) with a simple demonstration of its use.

The executable prog appears to be compiled from source code for bmap version 1.0.20. However, the code has been modified to abbreviate its arguments.

The bmap source was compiled on Redhat Linux 9.0 to produce a statically linked, stripped binary.

MD5 hash: df63f87f3ff69f1a18cfb284b301d627 bmap

bmap: ELF 32-bit LSB executable, Intel 80386, version 1 (SYSV), for GNU/Linux 2.2.5, statically linked, stripped MD5 hashes for prog and for the compiled bmap source do not match. Mismatched MD5 hashes can result from different compiler options or library versions also, but since obtaining a matching hash would require modifying the source code for bmap, with no source for prog, the effort would merely be a guessing game.

An strace was run on bmap under identical conditions as the one performed on prog. First a data write was performed, then a data read was performed. The file related system calls are identical to prog. These strace runs are also in Appendix B.

Finally, a keyword search for "bmap" in the output of strings for prog and for bmap is compared.

strings -a prog | grep 'bmap'
bmap_get_slack_block
bmap_get_block_count
bmap_get_block_size
bmap_raw_open
bmap_raw_close
```

```
strings -a bmap | grep 'bmap'
bmap
bmap_get_slack_block
bmap_raw_open
bmap_raw_close

The sub-string "bmap" appears in several longer strings. Examination of the bmap source code shows that these are function names, appearing in the file bmap.h.

The bmap executable and the prog executable both have help options. By comparison of the help displays, it is apparent that the functions are similar.

Functionality of the prog and bmap executables was compared above. The demonstrations of the two executables show that they each access their target files in the same way, and one can read data hidden by the other.

Finally, references to bmap in the prog executable lead to the conclusion that prog is indeed based on the bmap source code.

1.6 Legal Implications

The evidence recovered from the diskette indicates that prog was executed at least once. No proof was found that it was executed on any of the organization's computers.

Executing prog with any meaningful results requires root privileges. If root privileges are obtained without authorization, that would violate our organization's acceptable use policy. It would also be considered an ethics violation, misrepresenting oneself to obtain a service.

Executing prog itself would be considered a violation of acceptable use policy, because it violates access controls.

Legally, unauthorized access to computers or networks in the United States is addressed in Title 18 USC section 1030, the computer fraud and abuse act. If the user of this program achieved root access by unauthorized means, they may be guilty of a federal crime under this statute.

1.7 Interview Questions

Since John Price has already attempted to erase evidence of his activity and already lied about ownership of the disk when questioned, I would avoid pointed questions until the end of the interview.

Do you have root access on any of the organization's computers?

Which computers do you have access to?

Do you have the authority to install software?

Do you buy or sell things on ebay?

Do you know how to build an executable from source code?

Were you using the organization's computers for any reason on July 16 at 2:00AM?

Are you familiar with a program called bmap?

Have you ever used bmap?

1.7 Case Information

The contents of the recovered floppy disk are shown in the output from ls (die.net) performed on the disk, using the l (long), a (all), R (recursive), and t (sort by time) options. Output is listed in Appendix C. Note that mnt/ is the mount point for the disk image.

The disk image was examined for data in the slack space of each file. When "bmap --mode slack" was run, it reported empty slack for all but one file. The file mnt/Docs/Sound-HOWTO-html.tar.gz contained 170 bytes of non-null characters out of 805 bytes of slack space. The data appears to be garbage.

Next, the file contents were examined. All of the zip files (.gz) were unzipped, and the tar archives (.tar) were extracted. Each file was opened using the appropriate application.

Sound-HOWTO-html.tar.gz - Gzipped tar archive containing html files.
Information about sound hardware and various sound file formats
MP3-HOWTO-html.tar.gz - Gzipped tar archive containing html files. Information about creating, listening to, and working with mp3 format sound files.
DVD-Playing-HOWTO-html.tar - Tar archive containing html files. Instructions for getting DVD movies to play on Linux Kernel-HOWTO-html.tar.gz - Gzipped tar archive containing html files.
Instructions for modifying the Linux kernel.

ebay300.jpg - jpeg image, appears to be part of a web page. Contains the ebay logo, and the text of an error message.

sect-num.gif - GIF image, appears to be a diagram showing how sectors are arranged on a computer disk.

sectors.gif - GIF image, appears to be a diagram demonstrating computer disk geometry, showing an example of a sector and a track.

nc-1.10-16.i386.rpm..rpm - Redhat Package Manager package. RPM reports this as nc-1.10

Letter.doc - A Microsoft Word template for a business letter.

Mikemsg.doc - A Microsoft Word document, appears to be a letter regarding a business transaction. The text of this document is reproduced here:

Hey Mike,

I received the latest batch of files last night and I'm ready to rock-n-roll (ha-ha).

I have some advance orders for the next run. Call me soon.

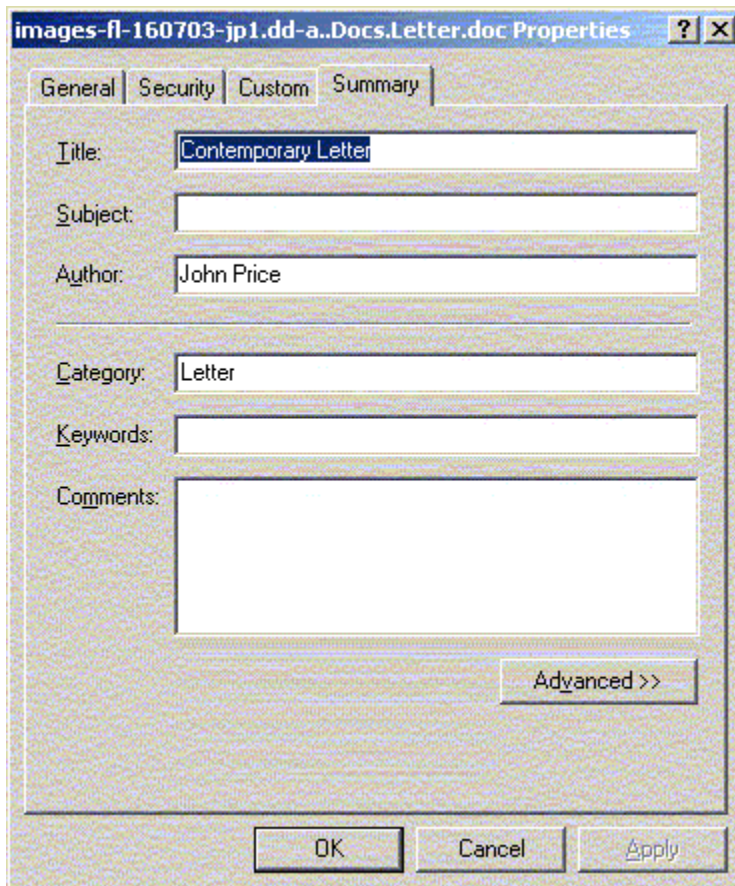

JP

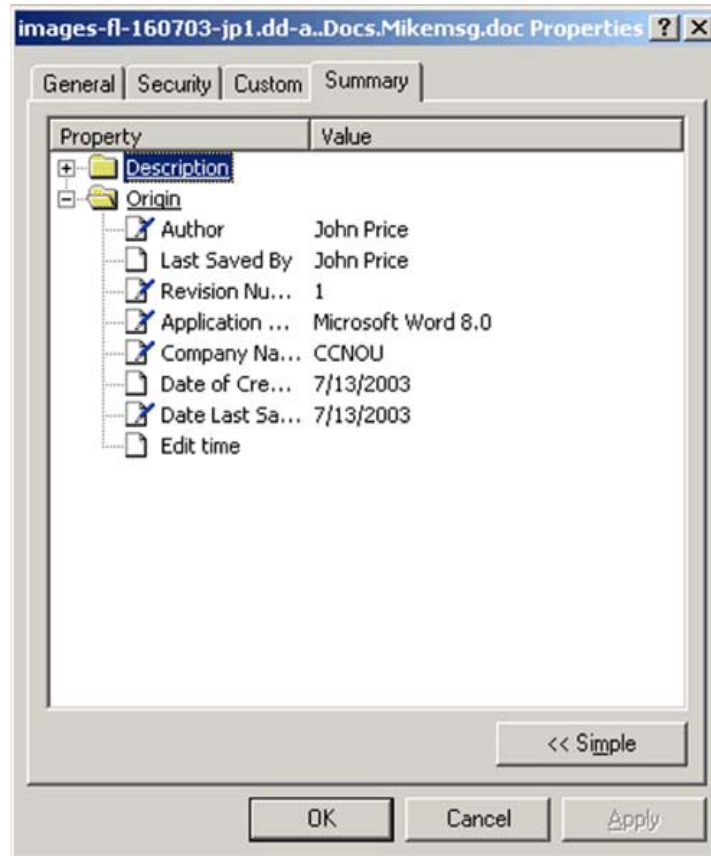

This document implies that John Price has been using company owned computers for non-company business. It does not prove that he was trafficking in copyrighted materials, but any activity related to outside businesses is forbidden by company policy. The document refers to previous communication between John Price and Mike. A search of mail logs and archives for previous communications between them may be productive.

..~5456g.tmp - binary file, type unknown, owned by root.

Note that the owner of nearly all of the files on the disk is user ID 502. We do not know the user name that this ID corresponds to, without the password file from the victim system. The files on the floppy disk do contain other identifying information, however.

The files Mikemsg.doc and Letter.doc were examined using Microsoft Word, and both were found to contain information identifying the author as John Price.

This links John Price to the user ID 502 on the victim machine. This contradicts his statement that the floppy disk is not his. User ID 502 is also the owner of the prog executable.

Additionally, the 3.5 inch diskette is formatted in ext2 format, a unix file system format. The documents were created in Microsoft Word 2000, available on Microsoft Windows only, (Macintosh uses a different version of word). Therefore, John Price had access to at least two computers.

Also found on the disk, and owned by user ID 502, is the file nc-1.10-16.i386.rpm..rpm the installer package for netcat version 1.10. Netcat is a network utility, which can perform many different tasks involving the copying of files from one computer to another. Netcat can communicate using any port the user chooses, and does not require root privileges to install or use.

The only file not owned by user ID 502 is .~5456g.tmp, a binary file of unknown type. Normally the .tmp suffix designates temporary files, discarded after an application is run.

Next, recovery of deleted files was attempted. Two entries for deleted files were found in the disk image. Data fragments for two files were also found.

When files are deleted in a unix file system, the directory entry is marked as deleted, but the data is not overwritten until the space is reused for another file.

The two deleted filenames found were:

```
mnt/prog
mnt/DVD-DVD-Playing-HOWTO-html.tar.gz

Two unallocated inodes were found containing data, but nothing noteworthy was recovered.

One file was not recoverable. Although the file meta-data reported a file size of 546116 bytes, only 12379 bytes of data were found on the disk. The recovered fragments contained no recognizable text, and were not identifiable by type of file.

The second file was recovered. The file meta-data reported a file size of 100,430 bytes. The first part of the recovered file contained a copy of DVD-Playing-HOWTO-html.tar. The rest of the recovered data blocks contained null characters.

1.7.1 Advice

Because prog is self-contained, it has no installation process to give away its presence, but it is unusable without root access to the system. The need for root access may be the best way to detect the use of this utility on a system. Access to the root password on most systems is tightly controlled, and the use of the root account can be closely monitored.

If the user attempts to gain root access illegally, it will require the presence of a vulnerability on the system, and an exploit to take advantage of it. This exposes the user to detection when attempting to use the exploit.

A user of prog may try to avoid the need for frequent root access by creating an suid-root binary. Such binaries can be searched for with the following find command (die.net):

find / -perm +04000 -uid 0 -print

"/" tells find to start searching from the root directory.

"-perm +04000" tells find to look for the SUID bit set. 04000 is the octal code for the SUID permission bit.

"-uid 0" tells find to look for files owned by root.

"-print" tells find to print the full file name.

Searching the file system for SUID-root files is a good practice in general. They can indicate the presence of other malware applications on a system.

2.0 Part 2 - Forensic Analysis on an Unknown System

2.1 Case Synopsis

A hard disk drive was retrieved from the spare equipment inventory, and found to contain a partition, still containing operating system files and data. The original users and purpose of the disk were unknown.

The disk was taken into custody, and imaged for analysis. The goal of this analysis was to learn the identity of any users, the purpose of the original system the disk was part of, and the habits of the users.

2.2 Description of System

The system is a Microsoft Windows 2000 workstation containing a 20GB hard drive, and a second 2.5GB hard drive. The second drive contains a FAT-16 partition, 1024MB in size, containing a Microsoft Windows 95 operating system and data files. The second drive is in an unknown state, and the subject of this analysis.

The system contains a 10/100MB Ethernet NIC, a 3.5 inch Diskette drive, and an Iomega Zip-250 drive. The system also contains a CD-R/W drive, which was used to make a copy of the image for transport.

2.3 Hardware details:

Tag #	2004-03-001
Type	Seagate Medalist Pro hard disk
Model:	ST52520A
Size:	2564 MB
Serial #:	PC483015
Location:	Room 209

2.4 Image Media

When the partition was discovered, the disk was already installed in a live system, mounted as a data disk. The workstation was booted from its regular operating system partition. The system was left running, and forensic tools were run from a CD-ROM.

An image of the disk was obtained at the workstation, using a version of dd for windows released by George M. Garner Jr, as part of a set of freeware utilities for forensic acquisition (Garner). The disk was then taken into evidence, and a compressed image was copied onto CD-R media for analysis.

Appendix D contains the log output from the disk copy session. The dd command records the basic information for the drive copied, any error messages, and a checksum comparison. The full command line, with options selected, is included.

The dd command was run with the option conv=noerror. This option tells dd not to terminate if it experiences an error during copying. The copy operation generated eight errors, shown in the log. The errors all occur at the same spot on the disk, which is on a cluster boundary. This indicates that the cluster is marked as unusable by the file system. This is usually due to a known bad cluster on a disk. The dd command was run with the default block size of 4K. The disk was formatted with 32K cluster size, so each cluster requires 8 block reads. Therefore, there was only one bad cluster encountered.

2.5 Media Analysis

2.5.1 Media Analysis System Description

The system used for media analysis is a Redhat 9.0 Linux OS running on a Dell Inspiron 5150 Notebook PC containing 512MB RAM and 40 GB hard disk drive. The system is equipped with a built-in CD/DVD reader and a USB 3.5 inch diskette drive.

The analysis system is attached to a network hub, isolated from the corporate network. Also attached to the hub is a Dell Inspiron 5000 running Windows 2000. It is equipped with 384MB RAM and a 20GB hard disk drive. It also has a CD-ROM reader and a 3.5 inch diskette drive.

In addition to native operating system utilities, The Autopsy Forensic Browser and The Sleuth Kit (TSK) are installed on the analysis system. Both Autopsy and TSK are available from (sleuthkit.org).

The Sleuth Kit is a freeware set of media analysis utilities for unix. It is based in part on The Coroner's Toolkit (TCT). TSK can read multiple file system formats, including FAT and NTFS. This permits analysis of images recovered from a MS Windows system on Unix.

The Autopsy Forensic Browser provides a graphical interface for TSK, using HTML. The investigator interacts with Autopsy through a web browser, and can access Autopsy from a remote machine.

2.5.2 File system

The file system resides on a FAT-16 partition of 1023.75MB in size. The cluster size is 16KB. The file system contains 2671 allocated files and 2229 unallocated files.

2.5.3 Operating System

The Operating system is a Windows 95 installation, Service Release 2.1. The version of windows can be identified from the modification dates of the operating system files. (Microsoft KBA 158238) provides a list of the modification dates for each version. For Windows 95 SR2.1, the article lists a date range of 8/24/96-8/27/97. For the next release, SR2.5, the dates are 8/24/96-11/18/97.

The bulk of Operating system files on the suspect image report a modification date of 8/24/96. Apart from files modified during the install process, the latest modification date for a system file is c:\windows\system\MSVBM50.DLL 7/19/97. No files were found with modification dates between 8/27/97 and 11/18/97.

2.5.4 Malware

The suspect image was examined for the presence of viruses, backdoors or other malicious code, using a commercial anti-virus scanner.

The suspect image was shared, read-only, on the analysis network using SAMBA. A SAMBA server allows MS Windows computers to see a shared partition as if it were an ordinary windows network share.

The image was mounted, which allows it to be accessed as if it were a physical disk, with the following mount command (die.net):

mount -t vfat -o loop,ro,umask=022,uid=forensic,gid=users,show_sys_files=true \
/images/part2.img /mnt/windows_forensic_server

The command and its options

-t vfat	tells mount to use type vfat, which recognizes any FAT filesystem
-o loop	-o introduces options, loop is short for loopback, and tells mount this is an image, not a physical disk
ro	ro means read only. No changes are allowed to any part of the image
umask=022	umask sets file permissions to give access to all files, regardless of their owner
uid=forensic	remote users connect with privileges of user forensic, an existing user on the server
gid=users	remote users will be assigned to the group users
show_sys_files	this shows normally hidden, windows files
/images/part2.img	This tells mount the location of the image
/mnt/windows_forensic_server	This tells mount where to make the image available on the system

The shared partition was mounted by the windows 2000 analysis system, and scanned with Mcafee Anti-virus version 7.0. Mcafee Anti-virus is a commercial scanner sold by Network Associates, Inc. It scans for all currently known Windows and DOS viruses, trojans, and backdoors. The scan found no infected items. Output is listed in Appendix E.

2.5.5 Applications

Windows 95 includes several applications as part of the operating system base install. These include Internet Explorer, and the Microsoft Windows Accessories. Apart from the operating system, the following applications were found on the suspect disk:

c:\Program Files\Microsoft Games\Age of Empires II\empires2.exe

c:\Program Files\Maxis\SimCity 2000\SIMCITY.EXE

c:\MAXIS\EARTHWIN\WGAIA.EXE

The file c:\MAXIS\EARTHWIN\README.WRI identifies this application as SimEarth

c:\Windows\System\3NICDIAG.EXE

3COM Network Interface Card Diagnostics

Unexpectedly, no business related applications were found on the disk.

2.5.6 Users

One password file, c:\windows\FBUCK.PWL, was identified on the system. Windows 95 keeps a separate password file for each username in the c:\windows\ directory.

2.5.7 Email

A search was performed for email on the system. The two mail clients used at our site are Microsoft Outlook and Eudora. Microsoft mailbox files carry a .PST extension, and Eudora mailbox files carry .MBX or .TOC. A search of the suspect image found no files with any of these extensions. The user did not appear to be storing mail locally on the system.

The image was searched for installed email applications. None was found. An examination of the web browser cache showed no links to web based email services.

Based on these results, if the system was used for email at all, the user would have to connect directly to our mail server and read mail. Our mail server supports Pine, a command line mail reader, and access via telnet or SSH, for this purpose.

2.5.8 Logs

Several log files were found on the system. They are summarized here

C:\VBOOTLOG.TXT - last modified 03/26/00 18:35:34

This file is a log of the boot process. Logging of the boot practice is normally activated only after an unsuccessful boot attempt. The file contains no error messages, appearing to log a successful system boot.

C:\VBOOTLOG.PRV - last modified 03/26/00 18:18:24

This file retains the previous contents of bootlog.txt. It also appears to log a successful boot.

C:\VDETLOG.TXT - last modified 04/23/00 11:21:24

This file is generated during the windows hardware detection process.

c:\VDETLOG.OLD - last modified 03/26/00 17:14:16

This file contains the previous copy of detlog.txt.

C:\VNETLOG.TXT - last modified 03/26/00 17:21:12

This file is generated during the network portion of the Windows hardware detection process.

c:\VSCANDISK.LOG - last modified 04/23/00 11:35:38

This file contains the results of the most recent scandisk operation. Scandisk reported finding no problems on the drive C:\ at 11:35AM, 04/23/00

C:\VSETUPLOG.TXT - last modified 03/26/00 17:42:16

This file is generated during Windows installation process.

C:\VSUDHLOG.DAT - last modified 03/26/00 17:29:52

This file contains backups of boot records from previous versions of DOS or Windows.

C:\WINDOWS\SYSTEM\VBRUNTME.LOG - last modified 04/23/00 11:45:24

This file is generated during installation of MS Visual Basic Runtime. The following was found in the file:

*** Installation Started 04/23/00 11:12 ***

Title: VB Runtime Installation

2.5.9 Web Cache and History Files

The suspect image was examined for web browser software. A copy of Internet Explorer was found installed on the system. The history and cache folders were examined using IE History Viewer, available from the Phillips Ponder Company (Ponder). The IE History Viewer allows the user to examine history files from Internet Explorer, Netscape, and the Microsoft Windows recycle bin.

The following Internet Explorer history files were found:

C:\WINDOWS\COOKIES\MM256.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\COOKIES\MM2048.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\HISTORY\MM256.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\HISTORY\MM2048.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE1\MM256.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE1\MM2048.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE2\MM256.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE2\MM2048.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE3\MM256.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE3\MM2048.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE4\MM256.DAT

C:\WINDOWS\TEMPORARY INTERNET FILES\CACHE4\MM2048.DAT

For versions of Internet Explorer before 4.0, the file MM256.DAT indexes URL's up to 256 characters in length. URL's longer than 256 characters are indexed in MM2048.DAT. A detailed description of these files can be found in (Microsoft KBA 178702).

IE History viewer reported all of the files to be empty. The files all possessed the same modification date and time, 11:49:32, 4/23/2000. Since the timeline analysis, detailed below, revealed an installation date of 3/26/2000, the files must have been modified since their creation, therefore, the user must have cleared the Internet Explorer history.

2.5.10 Recycle Bin

The Recycle Bin of the suspect image was examined for activity.

Three files were found in the recycle bin:

_NFO
_CO.LNK
desktop.ini

Filenames beginning with "_" indicate deleted files.

_NFO is probably the remnants of the INFO file. The original locations of files that are moved to the recycle bin are stored here. File recovery was attempted, but the data blocks have been re-allocated to another file. A search of the image for data fragments from INFO found nothing.

desktop.ini is a file used by Windows to determine how to display the contents of a folder. It is normally a hidden system file. This copy of desktop.ini contains a registry key. Looking up the key in the registry (recovered below) reveals a set of sub-keys related to the recycle bin, including pointers to the recycle bin icons.

_CO.LNK was recovered and examined. Results are below under the Deleted Files section.

2.5.11 Recent Items Folder

Links to the following files were found in the Recent Items Folder:

C:\Program Files\Maxis\SimCity 2000\Cities\MXBURG.SC2
C:\Program Files\Maxis\SimCity 2000\Cities\TORONTO.SC2
E:\funstuff\videos\highperf\goodtime.avi
E:\funstuff\videos\mpeg\goodtime.mpg
E:\funstuff\videos\mpeg\weezer.mpg

E:\funstuff\videos\highperf\welcome1.avi
E:\README.TXT

The first two files are part of the SimCity 2000 application. They appear to be saved games. The remaining files are unrecoverable, because the E: partition was not found on the suspect disk. Either the partition was deleted, or it resided on another drive.

2.5.12 Registry

The simplest method for registry examination for a Windows 2000 or XP system is to use regedt32, and import the registry branches, called hives, for viewing. Otherwise, one of several commercially available registry viewers can be used.

The registry for Windows 95/98/ME operating systems is structured differently from the registry in Windows 2000/XP. The 95/98/ME registry exists in two files, in the windows directory, SYSTEM.DAT and USER.DAT. The hives cannot be imported, because the regedt32 registry editor cannot read them correctly, and the older regedit editor does not support importation of hives.

If a commercial viewer is unavailable, then the registry files must be converted to a readable form. This can be done with regedit, but it requires a live windows 95/98/ME system. Regedit supports exporting and importing registry keys in registry entry files. Registry entry files have a default extension of .reg, but they contain only text. They are described in detail in (Microsoft KBA 310516).

To convert an entire registry to a .reg format file, the suspect registry must be substituted for the existing registry on a Windows 95/98/ME system, and then exported. This can be done using the GUI in SAFE mode, but it is quicker from the Real Mode command prompt. Appendix F contains a procedure for exporting a windows 95 registry, based on (Microsoft KBA 310516).

The exported registry file was examined using a text editor.

Several keys contain entries for programs to be run on startup. Their contents are summarized here.

[HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Run
]
"SystemTray"="SysTray.Exe"
"ActiveMovie File Extensions"="ActMovie.exe /Check"
"COMSMDEXE"="comsmd.exe -on"
```

[HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Run
Once]
```

```
[HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Run
ServicesOnce]

SysTray.exe is the Windows 95 System Tray, which displays icons on the taskbar for access to running processes.

ActiveMovie is an extension of Internet Explorer for streaming media.

Comsmd.exe is a modem driver from 3COM corporation.

Both the RunOnce and RunServicesOnce keys were empty.

The Windows registry keeps track of URL's that are typed directly into internet explorer. Examination of the registry key revealed little.

[HKEY_USERS\.Default\Software\Microsoft\Internet Explorer\TypedURLs]
"url1"="http://home.microsoft.com/"

A registry key was found for the most recent application to use DirectDraw. DirectDraw is part of the Windows DirectX 3D graphic library.

[HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE\Microsoft\DirectDraw\MostRecentApplic
ation]
"Name"="EMPIRES2.ICD"
```

The following TCP/IP information was found in a network related registry key:

[HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\System\CurrentControlSet\Services\Class\NetTrans\ 0002]
"DriverDesc"="TCP/IP"
"InfPath"="NETTRANS.INF"
"DevLoader"="*ndis"
"MaxMTU"="1496"
"DriverDate"=" 8-24-1996"
"DeviceVxDs"="vtdi.386,vip.386,vtcp.386,vdhcp.386,vnbt.386"
"InstallVnbt"="0"

The IP address and mask of 0.0.0.0 indicate that the original machine was configured to use DHCP, a protocol for assigning IP addresses dynamically.

2.5.13 Start-up processes

The folder C:\windows\Start Menu\programs\startup can contain programs that will be launched during user login, independently of the registry. The folder was empty.

2.6 Timeline Analysis

The file activity (MAC) timeline was generated from Autopsy. The ability within autopsy to generate the timeline is completely automatic, selected from the main menu.

I found the timeline generated by autopsy to be somewhat inconvenient for automatic parsing, because autopsy omits duplicate date and time fields for multiple files with an identical timestamp. I used a perl filter to re-construct the file so that each file has date and time fields, even duplicates. This version of the timeline is less human readable than the original, as I was unable to process the file without destroying the formatting. The file size also increased substantially. For this reason, the original timeline is included in this report, rather than my expanded version. The perl script is attached in Appendix G.

Attached as appendix J is the MAC timeline obtained from the image. Confidential information has been sanitized.

Sat Aug 24 1996 11:11:10 15252 m.. -/rwxrwxrwx 0 0 343563
C:\WINDOWS\AUTOEXEC.BAT
16384 mac d-/rwxrwxrwx 0 0 999999 c:\VMYFILES/

Each file access is represented by a single entry in the timeline. The first part of the entry is the date and time of the file activity. If multiple entries have identical date and time, it is shown only for the first entry.

Next is the file size in bytes.

Next are the activity types. An "m" indicates file modification. File modification date and time is used for the file timestamp shown in the Windows directory listing. An "a" indicated read access to the file. A "c" indicated creation date of the file. A "." indicates no activity. More than one type of activity can be shown in a single entry.

Next are the file permissions. A "d" in the first position indicated a directory, while a "d" in the second position indicated the file is deleted. An "r" indicates read permission. If it is not present, the file is hidden. A "w" indicates write permission. If it is absent, the file is read-only. An "x" indicated execute permission. This is not used in the FAT file system, so it is always present.

The Next are user and group ID's. These will always be zero, as they are not used in the FAT file system.

Next is the directory entry number, a pointer to the file's data. This will be a unique number for each file.

Finally is the file name, prefixed by the full path.

2.6.1 FAT File System

One curious detail of the FAT file system caused much difficulty in the timeline analysis. According to the Microsoft Developer Network library (Microsoft MSDN), a Windows system installed on a FAT file system will record file access time as midnight of the access date, regardless of the actual access time. This feature makes recorded access times nearly useless. In particular, determining in what order applications are executed, becomes impossible.

Inspection of the timeline shows this to be the case for file access dates occurring during the part of the year when daylight savings time is in effect. During standard time, the access times are listed as 23:00:00. If this is due to an error in the handling of daylight savings time, it implies that the file access date listed is the day before the actual access date.

2.6.2 Installation Date

The install date, as determined from examining the timeline, is 3/26/2000. (Microsoft KBA 138306) lists several operating system files whose modification dates are changed during the install process, indicating the install date.

setver.exe, smartdrv.exe

windows\command
extract.exe, scandisk.exe

windows\system
commctrl.dll, commdlg.dll, lzexpand.dll, mini.cab, msprint.dll, mstcp.dll, netapi.dll, netdi.dll, netos.dll, rnasetup.dll, setupx.dll, shell.dll, sysdetmg.dll, ver.dll

All .dll files and setver.exe were set to 3/26/00. The other three files were set to 8/24/96, the original date for the other system files. Although this is at variance with the documentation, it suggests the documentation may be in error, rather than any confusion over the install date.

In light of the file activity that predates the install, it is obvious that this is a re-install.

2.6.3 Updates and Patches

Service releases for Microsoft Windows 95 were not typically made available as upgrades.

Microsoft DirectX was upgraded on two dates, 03/29/00, and 04/09/00. The upgrades correspond to the install dates of game software onto the machine.

Software installations

Installation dates of software are indicated by the file creation dates of executable and other files. Modification dates are not reliable, because they are not changed when files are unpacked from archives.

On 03/29/00, Microsoft Age Of Empires 2 was installed on the system. This is game software.

On 04/09/00 13:36, Maxis SimEarth, was installed. This is also game software.

On 04/09/00 17:17:00 Maxis Sim City 2000 was also installed.

Other Significant events

On 04/23/00, the Internet Explorer cache was purged. There are no files remaining in the cache, implying that Internet Explorer was not used after the purge.

On 04/23/00 at 11:35AM, scandisk was run, according to the modification date of SCANDISK.LOG. This agrees with the internal date of the logfile. Scandisk found no errors in the file system.

On 04/23/00, the system booted for the final time at 12:58PM. On bootup, Windows 95 always creates a backup of the registry. The registry is kept in the files system.dat and user.dat. The backups are kept in system.da0 and user.da0.

2.7 Deleted File Recovery

The Autopsy forensic browser has the ability to generate a list of deleted files. The list does not contain files whose directory listings have been overwritten, however. It also does not contain files from the Internet Explorer cache. Internet Explorer maintains its cache using special cache files. These files were examined earlier.

The deleted file list is based on deleted entries found within directories. This is different from the Directory Entry Number, Microsoft's term for the metadata structure of each file. In the FAT filesystem, the Directory Entry Number serves the function of the NTFS MFT entry of unix inode.

There was an entry for one deleted file, `_CO.LNK`, found in the Recycle Bin. This file recovered first, as it was the most recently deleted file on the system, and likely to be intact. `_CO.LNK` is a Windows shortcut file. The following strings were recovered from the file:

Sound\scenario\w1wc.mp3 Sound\scenario\w1wc.mp3 1 -1
Sound\scenario\w2a.mp3 Sound\scenario\w2a.mp3 1 -1
Sound\scenario\w2aa.mp3 Sound\scenario\w2aa.mp3 1 -1
Sound\scenario\w2b.mp3 Sound\scenario\w2b.mp3 1 -1

These files were found in `c:\Program Files\Microsoft Games\Age of Empires II\Sound\Scenarios\`. They appear to be verbal hints for players of this game.

The list of deleted files found by Autopsy is in Appendix H. There were 153 files found. Most of the files were Windows files, or were found inside `c:\Program Files\Microsoft Games\Age of Empires II\`. A few files were not obvious, and were examined.

`C:\WINDOWS\TEMP_EM9103.TMP` and `c:\WINDOWS\TEMP_LGD021.TMP` were recovered, and contained binary data.

`C:\WINDOWS\SYSTEM_EMP.000` appears to be a DLL file, but was not recovered intact.

`C:\WINDOWS\SYSTEM\~GLH000B.TMP` appears to be an executable, but was not intact.

`C:\WINDOWS\DESKTOP_!$.ME` was unrecoverable.

`C:\WINDOWS\DESKTOP\ONLINE~1_NFORM~1.TXT` is a readme file for configuring online service providers.

`C:\WINDOWS\DESKTOP\ONLINE~1_!$-23.ME` is identical to the previous file.

The unallocated portion of the suspect image contains directory entry numbers, for 2226 files. Most of these files are from the Internet Explorer cache. This can be seen from a tally of files by extension, using extensions common among web cache files. These numbers are compiled from the timeline.

Total files	2226
.GIF	1254
.HTM	408
.JPE	265
.JPG	6
other	293

Since the user had purged the web cache, the unallocated files were examined for evidence of web activity. The string search, detailed below, produced evidence of possible inappropriate web use, but nothing definite. Files with suggestive names were identified, by searching the filenames identified in the timeline. They were then recovered by looking up the Directory Entry Number.

Name	Contents
_DULT.GIF	Fragment, no recoverable image
_ONDAG~4.HTM	Fragment, appears to be part of a page from an adult web site.
_ONDAG~5.HTM	Fragment, binary data. Probably overwritten
_N_BON~1.JPE	empty
_N_BON~2.JPE	empty
_N_BON~3.JPE	empty
_N_BON~4.JPE	Fragment, no recoverable image

None of these files was recovered intact. None of the files had more than 32Kbytes of data, which is equal to the cluster size of the suspect image.

A final observation regarding the unallocated files should be noted. No files of type .HTM, .GIF, .JPE, or .JPG were observed in the timeline with dates after 03/26/00. This was the date of the re-install, and suggests that the user was not using the system for web access after this date. Despite the clearing of the web cache on 04/23/00, the cache may have been already empty.

2.8 String Search

The Autopsy forensic browser includes an automatic string search capability. A file containing text strings is first generated from the image under analysis. Searches are then conducted on this file, returning the location within the image where the string was found. The investigator can then examine the data block containing the string, and attempt to retrieve the file, if necessary.

The suspect image was searched for keywords likely to be related to the observed activity on the suspect system. Since the only applications found on the system were games, the topic of gaming provided most of the keywords and phrases used. In addition, the system was used for internet access, so keywords that would reveal access to other systems were also selected.

The keywords are summarized here, with the number of hits each:

game server	0
zone.msn.com	0
games.msn.com	0
multiplayer	30
user account	134
username	884

The search did not yield information pointing to any gaming activity on the network. No account names, passwords, or server names were found in any of the data blocks containing the search strings. All referenced to the above search terms were found within help files from Windows or the various applications.

Other searches were attempted that yielded so many hits, that the results were impractical to sort through. The username found earlier, FBUCK, was tried, as were two canned searches supplied with autopsy. One of the search strings is for IP addresses, the other for date strings.

IP	2065
date	79119
FBUCK	2039

Autopsy can also perform string searches that are restricted to unallocated space. Since all of the web cache data was purged, a string search of the unallocated space was performed, to try to profile web browser activity. First, the company name, Veeblefetzter, was searched, then the username, FBUCK. Finally, terms were searched that were likely to identify common inappropriate activities.

Veeblefetzter	37
FBUCK	1979
adult	832
casino	13
shopping	260

The results for Veeblefetzter were found entirely within bits of old emails. The email files were unrecoverable, but the fragments show that FBUCK received email on the system at one time.

The search for "adult" generated hits that fell into three categories. The first, accounting for more than half of the hits, appeared to be advertisements for adult products, services, and web sites. These included links to images claiming to be sexually explicit, but no such images were found on the suspect system. The second category were found in the phrase "young adult fiction", within fragments of HTML from a bookstore website. The third category appeared to be HTML fragments with "adult" as part of a longer word.

The search for "casino" revealed advertisements for online casinos. No evidence was found of actual gambling activity.

The search for shopping turned up HTML from online shopping web sites of major retailers. It appears that the suspect system was used to shop for clothing and personal items.

2.9 Conclusions

The system to which the suspect image belonged, had one identifiable user, FBUCK. Windows 95 is primarily a single user operating system, so it is unlikely that there were others.

Prior to March 26, 2000, the history of the system is mostly unknown. Fragments of email messages indicate an installed email application, and web activity is indicated by fragments of HTML files.

Email activity appeared to be work related. No systematic search could be made of email, so this result is not conclusive.

Web activity appeared to be, in part, non-work related. Evidence of internet shopping was found. Links to adult related material were found, but these are inconclusive, as these sometimes appear in unsolicited email. No images of an adult nature were found on the disk image.

After the operating system was re-installed on March 26, 2000, game programs were installed on the system. No work related applications were found to be installed, suggesting that the machine was used only for gaming. It may have been used for internet access as well, but there is no direct evidence to support this.

The system continued to be used for approximately four weeks, until April 23, 2000. This is the date of the last system boot.

The timeline shows that the machine was used both during and outside of business hours. It is possible that the system was being used at the user's residence on loan, as this is permitted in our organization.

Limitations in both the Windows 95 operating system and the FAT file system prevented certain kinds of information from being collected. This made constructing an event history difficult. These limitations did not interfere with documenting and the types of activities the system was used for, even after an operating system re-install.

3.0 Part 3 - Legal Issues Concerning Materials on Publicly Available Servers

Organizations that provide online services to the public, have certain responsibilities when their networks or servers are used for illegal activities. This is a brief overview of provider responsibilities regarding two kinds of illegal material that may be found on public servers. Copyrighted materials and Child pornography each have statutes addressing them. Requirements for handling the two kinds of material differ.

3.1 Statutes Relating to Copyright Infringement

Title 17, United States Code defines US copyright law. It includes all of the provisions of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, (DMCA). The material in this section is summarized from these statutes. The complete text of US copyright law is available online through the US Copyright Office.

Section 106 states that the owner of copyright has the exclusive right to make and distribute copies of a copyrighted work. Copying or distributing copies of a work without the permission of the copyright holder is considered infringement.

The copyright holder has several remedies available against an infringer. Section 502 provides for injunctions against copyright infringers. Section 503 provides for impounding and disposition of infringing articles. Section 504 provides for recovery of damages, actual or statutory, and any profits yielded by the infringing activity. Section 505 provides for recovery of costs and attorneys fees.

Section 506 defines copyright infringement as criminal, if the infringer willfully distributes copyrighted works for financial gain, or distributes more than $1,000 worth of copyrighted works in any 180-day period.

If an infringement is determined to be criminal, section 509 provides for seizure and forfeiture of infringing articles, and any materials or equipment used to manufacture the infringing articles. Title 18, section 2319 outlines penalties for criminal copyright infringement in addition to the penalties in Title 17. A schedule of maximum fines and prison terms is listed.

Section 507 specifies limitations on actions resulting from infringement. Criminal proceedings are limited to within five years, and civil actions are limited to within three years.

Section 512 defines the extent of liabilities for a service provider resulting from online distribution. Subsection (c) states that a service provider shall not be liable for infringement, provided they meet three requirements. First, they must have no direct or indirect knowledge of infringing materials on their systems or networks. Second, upon obtaining such knowledge, they must remove the material expeditiously. Third, they must derive no financial benefit from the presence of the infringing material.

3.2 Actions for Handling of Copyrighted Material

If copyrighted material were discovered being distributed on an organization's computers, the organization must quickly make certain that all copyrighted material is found and removed, in accordance with 512(c). Evidence of the infringement must be preserved, because of the potential for criminal prosecution.

If legal department chooses not to submit for prosecution, all confiscated materials need to be preserved for a period of five years. The statute of limitations for criminal copyright infringement is five years, three years for civil liability.

3.3 Child Pornography Statutes

Criminal penalties for the possession and distribution of child pornography are defined in Title 18, US Code 2252A.

Subsection (a)(1-4) states that anyone who knowingly mails, transports, sells, distributes or receives child pornography in interstate or foreign commerce by any means, including computer, is punishable by this statute. Anyone who reproduces such material for distribution is also punishable.

Subsection (a)(5) states that anyone who knowingly possesses such material that has been mailed, sold, or distributed in interstate or foreign commerce is punishable by this statute.

Subsection (b) establishes punishment guidelines for violators of subsection (a).

Subsection (d) provides for an affirmative defense against a charge of violating subsection (a)(5) if the defendant possessed less than three images, and promptly either destroyed them or reported the matter to a law enforcement agency. The law enforcement agency must be granted access to the images, if contacted, and in neither case may any other person be allowed to access any image or copy.

3.4 Handling of Child Pornography

Guidance for the handling of incidents where child pornography is discovered, or knowledge of the existence of child pornography is obtained, is available from the Department of Justice. The DOJ Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section (CEOS) maintains resources including points of contact, and applicable statutes.

According to the DOJ CEOS website (DOJ):

"The reporting section, 42 U.S.C. § 13032, which is similar to 42 U.S.C. § 13031, Child Abuse Reporting, requires anyone who is engaged in providing an electronic communication service to the public, and obtains knowledge of a violation of the child exploitation statutes, to report such violation to a law enforcement agency or agencies. The Attorney General is in the process of designating a federal law enforcement agency that will be responsible for receiving such reports by electronic service providers. A failure to report is subject to a civil fine of up to $50,000 in the first instance and $100,000 for any subsequent failure. No service provider may be held civilly liable for any action taken in good faith to comply with the reporting requirement."

Based on the above statutes and guidance, a service provider who finds material containing images containing child pornography on their servers must take the following steps:

- 1) The discovery of the material must be reported
- 2) All material must be removed from publicly available servers, or access must be disabled.
- 3) Nothing may be destroyed. All material must be made available to law enforcement.
- 4) No copies may knowingly be made of the material.

Appendix F

Procedure for win95 registry recovery

Transfer the recovered registry files, system.sus and user.sus, to the Windows 95/98/ME host.

Boot to the command prompt. This can be done by pressing the F8 key during startup, or by selecting "boot to command prompt" from the shutdown menu.

attrib -s -h -r system.dat
rename system.dat system.sav
attrib -s -h -r user.dat
rename user.dat user.sav
```

rename system.sus system.dat
rename user.sus user.dat
```

```
regedit /e registry.txt
```

The /e option exports the entire registry. The output file can have any extension. It will still have a .reg format.

rename system.dat system.sus
rename user.dat user.sus
```

```
rename system.sav system.dat
attrib +s +h +r system.dat
rename user.sav user.dat
attrib +s +h +r user.dat

Transfer registry.dat to the analysis system.
